Major Overview

Creative Writing majors pursue a wide range of career paths including marketing, publishing, technical writing, freelance writing, web writing, professional writing, and many, many others.

Creative Writing majors have an internship requirement, which may be fulfilled by completing an internship (e.g., the River Readings internship, publishing internships in New York or Denver, internships at the Midwest Writing Center, Putnam Museum, Quad-Cities Arts, etc.), by working on SAGA, or by taking ENGL 300: Book Publishing. The internship requirement is usually undertaken in students' sophomore, junior, or senior years.

During J-Term, Creative Writing majors may be interested in taking ENCW 300: Literary Residency, wherein they will have the chance to work on a project of their own choosing. Creative Writing students might also be advised to consider the department's (optional) J-Term study away options, offered in Mexico, England, Ireland, and Paris.
